The Table, with a Midnight Supper evening.

You picked The Table and asked whether Midnight Supper could come into it. It can, and it has. The preview below is the combined site: one candlelit walk through the evening, built around weddings and events, with your real prices, your reviews and a quote to your phone in one tap. Behind it sit the workflows that turn that quote into a booked table.

WHAT EVERY PAGE STANDS ON

5.0 The Knot · 13 reviews · Best of Weddings 2026 5.0 WeddingWire · 11 reviews · 100% recommend

You scroll. The evening moves.

There are no pages to click through. You step in through the venue doors and the camera walks the whole evening, chapter by chapter, until it stops at one candlelit place setting and asks for the number.

1 · Arrive. The doors part on a crack of warm light.

2 · The evening. Hall, kitchen, terrace. The clock counts 5:40 to 11:40 PM.

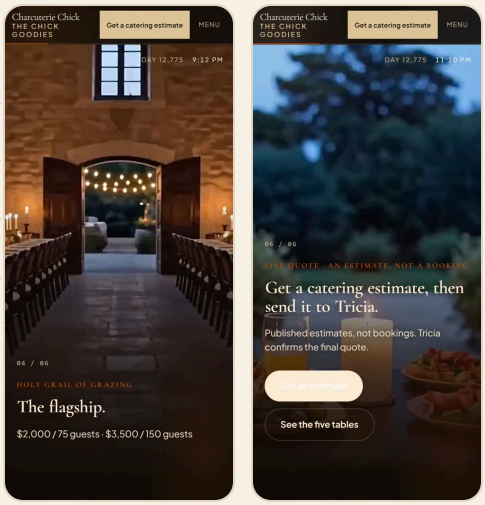

3 · The number. One place setting: get an estimate, send it to Tricia.

4 · Into the light. The camera pushes into the candle and the page rises out of it.

THEN THE PAGE ITSELF

- ✓ The five tables, Graze Me, Craze Me to the Holy Grail, set down like plates
- ✓ The spec sheet, your reviews, and the live estimate that texts Tricia
- ✓ Tricia, the work behind the table, the supporting cast
- ✓ Your cart, near the end with the add-ons

On a phone, the whole walk-through plays too.

What came from each.

The Table is the site. Midnight Supper gave it the evening. Everything leads with weddings and events.

FROM THE TABLE

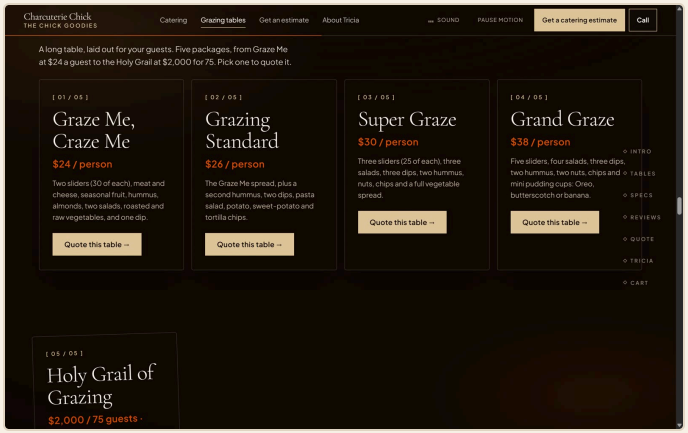

One room you never leave

- ✓ A continuous candlelit walk-through instead of pages
- ✓ Every scene change happens inside a flash of candlelight
- ✓ Headlines and photos arrive as you scroll, not all at once
- ✓ Optional room sound: candle crackle and a quiet hum, off until you tap it

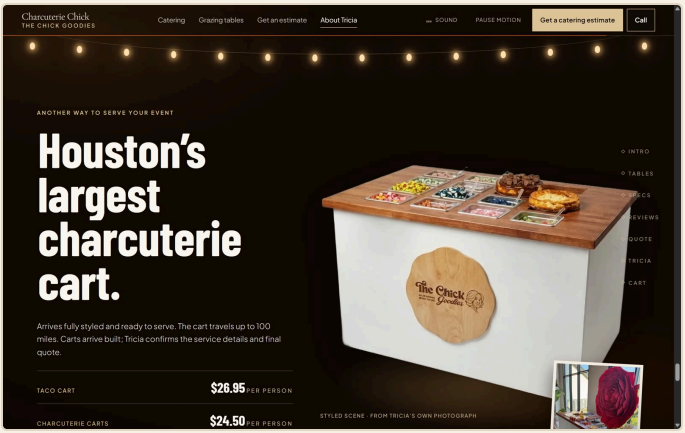

FROM MIDNIGHT SUPPER

The evening, and the cart

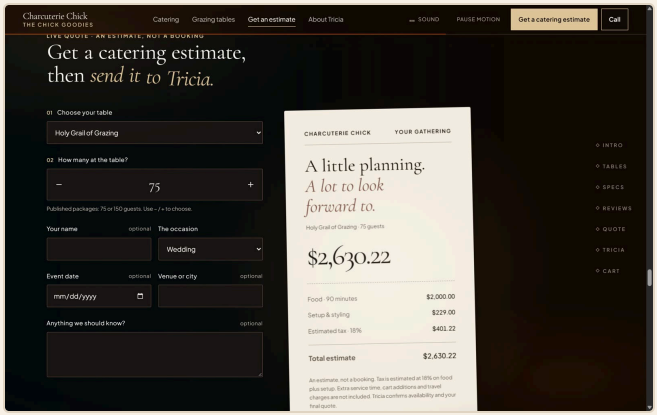

- ✓ The clock: Day 12,775, your thirty-five years, and the night from 5:40 to 11:40
- ✓ The near-black stage and the tall poster lettering
- ✓ The cart section, where the string lights come on one by one
- ✓ “Houston’s largest charcuterie cart,” from your Knot profile

The five tables, with your published prices.

Your cart, near the end with the add-ons.

The live estimate: food, the $229 setup fee and estimated tax, sent to Tricia by text or email. A request, not a booking.

NOTHING IS LOCKED

Colors, sections, words and photographs all move. Two rounds of changes before launch are included, then ninety days of care after it.

Your web address, logo, photos and words stay yours. The site files are yours at launch. Nothing on your current site changes until you say go.

Six texts follow one booking. You tap send.

What a workflow is

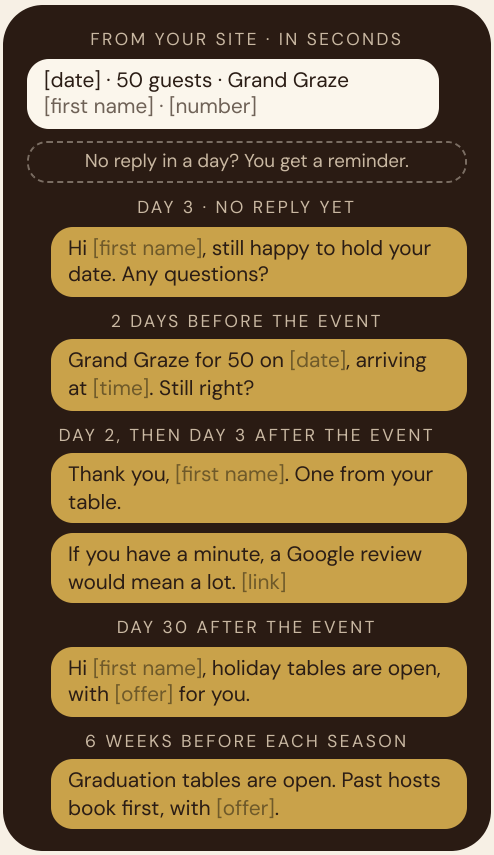

A message that is ready the moment something happens: a quote lands, an event ends, a season nears. We write each one with you, in your voice, and put it on your phone. On the day, your phone reminds you. You read it and tap send. Nothing goes out on its own, and nothing sounds like a robot.

It starts on the site you just saw.

When a host builds an estimate on the preview and taps send, it lands on Tricia's phone in seconds. That is routine 1. The other five follow the booking from there.

$500 What it buys

- ✓ Six routines on your phone, the ones drawn below
- ✓ Every message written with you, in your voice
- ✓ A reminder on the day, so nothing slips
- ✓ The log: every quote request, and whether it was answered
- ✓ One screen a month: calls, quotes, bookings, best photo
- ✓ Yours for good. No monthly fee, no software to learn, no chatbot

1. Never miss a quote
   A grazing table starts at $1,200. The host who does not hear back books someone else.
2. The quiet quote
   Silence is not a no. Three days on, a short nudge is ready to send.
3. Confirmed and counted
   The headcount is the price. Date, table, count and arrival time in writing before the day.
4. Turn every event into a review
   Reviews are the cheapest source of new bookings. 24 five-star reviews on The Knot and WeddingWire. This builds the same proof on Google.
5. Bring the host back
   A host who has seen your table needs no convincing. One note, a month later, with an offer you set.
6. The season ahead
   The calendar fills in the order people are asked. Holidays, graduations, weddings: past hosts hear first.

One saved quote pays for it twice. A grazing table starts at $1,200; the workflows are under half of one 50-guest table. In the Revenue Engine with The Table, they come with the site.

Your package.

The Revenue Engine, with The Table: the site you just walked through, the six workflows behind it, and your photographs finished properly. The same price as the September 18 proposal. Bringing Midnight Supper into The Table adds nothing to it.
